Dr. Larry Rueff grew up on a small grain and hog farm in Franklin, Indiana. He enrolled at Purdue University in 1972 and graduated with a B.S. in Animal Science in 1976 and a D.V.M. from Purdue University in 1979. In 2001 he received Purdue University's "Distinguished Agriculture Alumni Award". In 2005, the Purdue University College of Veterinary Medicine awarded him their "College of Veterinary Medicine Distinguished Alumni Award"

From 1979 to 1984 he was an associate of a mixed practice in Greensburg, Indiana with his primary interest in swine.

In 1984 he founded Swine Veterinary Services, which is now a three-veterinarian practice that oversees the health programs of farms that have an annual production of approximately 2,000,000 pigs per year. The emphasis of the practice is on establishing preventative herd health programs and interpreting production and economic records for commercial swine farms.

Dr. Rueff and his wife Gail have been married for 32 years and they have two daughters. Laura graduated from New York University Medical School in 2009 and Erin completed her 1st year in Optometry School at Ohio State University in 2009.

Dr. Rueff is a past president of the American Association of Swine Veterinarians. In 2002 he received that organizations award for "Swine Practitioner of the Year"

Dr. Rueff's clientele are predominantly Indiana swine farms, but he also does international consulting. He has done work in Venezuela, Canada and Asia. In the past 12 years he has made 15 trips to Asia with stops in the Peoples Republic of China, Taiwan, Philippines, Thailand, Korea, Malaysia, and Indonesia.
